Every four hours someone is hit by a train. These collisions have the potential to cause a multi-agency response to the incidents, and can become even more complex when a school bus is involved. Railroad Safety for First Responders, Educators, and School Bus Drivers will cover the challenges that frontline responders and school staff are faced with when responding to an incident on or near railroad property. This 3-hour class will prepare all involved (bus drivers, school administrators, law enforcement, first responders, etc.) and provide responding individuals the correct tools to safely navigate the unfamiliar environment of the railroad. Attendees will gain access to the safest ways to respond to railroad incidents.

Railroad Safety for First Responders, Educators, and School Bus Drivers uses real-life videos to show the consequences of not adhering to railroad safety protocols. This training is targeted to help participants develop a better understanding of the railroad and its community.

Instructor

Ashley Tuburan - Ashley Tuburan is a Navy veteran. She has been presenting on railroad safety for over 4 years, as well as doing CIT presentations.
